

What's Your Story?

-Rebecca Woodworth Brodie

In 1995, I was a single mother on welfare. I had dropped out of high school, was living in Section 8 housing, and received food stamps to buy groceries.

I did not know what to do, but I knew I wanted a better life for my daughter.

Twenty years later, I am a licensed Massachusetts attorney. I met my husband in law school and I now have three (3) children. I own my own law firm and teach at the University of Massachusetts Law School. I have a house on a lake in a nice town. Best of all, my daughter graduated high school and is now in college.

Like me, you have already written the toughest part of this story. The real question is, where do you go from here?

How does your story end?

Application Packets will be available in late June 2014.

Back to Court Program

at Brodie & Brodie

Tel: 508-328-4651

The Back-to-Court is a new and exciting pilot program.

Our goals are ambitious.

We plan to accept five (5) Massachusetts inmates into our program each year and help them to obtain their law degree.

Law school is an ambitious goal for anyone. For some inmates, this may require a commitment of a decade (10 years) or more.

We understand that some applicants may first need to finish high school and college before they can even to begin to consider applying to law school.
